Padalino Addresses Chamber June 13

The 2023-24 school year will be drawing to a close when Kingston City School District Superintendent Paul Padalino addresses the Chamber's next monthly breakfast meeting on June 13.

The breakfast is scheduled for 7:30 to 9:00 a.m. at The Venue Uptown at the Best Western Plus, 503 Washington Ave. in Kingston. The sponsor is HealthAlliance Hospital, members of WMCHHealth.

Padalino, who has now been Superintendent for 13 years, said 2023-24 "has been a very good year" for the district, which is the county's largest with 6,400 students. The district is also one of the county's largest employers.

"There's so much going on," Padalino said. "I think it will be a 'State of the Kingston City School District.' It's going to be a smorgasbord of information. I'm not going to focus on just one topic. It will be an update of where we are and where we're going." "Since the pandemic, we've had a lot of years of fluctuation, and even some unrest, but I think this year, I won't say we're back to normal, but we're back in the swing of things. Kids have been back to school for a couple of years and they're not transitioning from technology and that kind of thing."

"I think one of the other things I will hit on is post-pandemic education. What's going on post-pandemic? What's changed? What have we learned?"

Padalino is also expected to take business leaders on a video tour of the Kingston High School campus to highlight the results of the recently completed $137-million-dollar renovation. He also will update another $162.5-million building project approved by voters last May.

"It will touch nine of our 11 buildings and it's really an infrastructure upgrade," Padalino said. "We're looking at roofs, we're looking at wiring, we're looking at HVAC, we're looking at plumbing. There's not a lot of fancy stuff. There's no gymnasiums or football fields, but it's a lot of work that needs to be done."

Padalino also plans to touch on the state's Next Generation Learning Standards and the district's Universal Pre-K program, which boasts around 400 students.

He believes the public should be more aware of the pre-K program and the district's "extensive mental health services." While some call for more guidance counselors and social workers, Padalino said the public "doesn't realize how many we already have." There are mental health clinics in seven of the district's 11 schools.

I think one of the big things is that people don't recognize how intensive our mental health services are for our students," he said.

Padalino said the business community has been "very supportive" of the district and he expressed an interest in keeping groups like the Chamber better informed of the district's activities.

"Their continued support and involvement and the community partnerships throughout the whole county are phenomenal," he said. "I think keeping dialogues open is an important piece as well."

The superintendent also plans to provide an update on changing trends in the district given the migration of new residents from New York City, particularly Brooklyn, since the pandemic.

"Schools that were at one point some of our poorest schools are now not our poorest schools because of the influx of people from downstate," he said.

Transforming Care for our Community

After a decade of strategic planning, financial and clinical support from WMCHHealth, and construction and legislative backing from the City of Kingston, Ulster County, and New York State, HealthAlliance Hospital proudly unveiled its new hospital 17 months ago.

Environment of Care

We've meticulously crafted an atmosphere centered on patient comfort, education, and privacy. To make the patient experience as seamless as possible, we added new Emergency Department Concierge Navigators to our care team to offer enhanced assistance during visits to our emergency room.

Our Partnership with WMCHHealth Network has significantly broadened access to life-saving services in Kingston. Our Cardiac Catheterization Lab has performed over 1,000 heart procedures since it opened; we received which enabled us to care for for 240+ trauma patients since December 2023; and as a recently designated Certified Stroke Center, we've delivered stroke care to hundreds of patients annually. These investments underscore WMCHHealth's unwavering commitment to HealthAlliance Hospital and the communities we serve, ensuring the delivery of top-tier healthcare to our region.

Close to Home

is more than a tagline; it's a reality. Over 1,500 patients have received advanced care services locally. Additionally, our investment in advanced imaging, supported by Philips Technologies, has facilitated over 77,000 convenient, local radiological studies. And our Family Birth Center continues to support moms and welcome babies into the world.

Behavioral Health Investment

committed to enhancing behavioral health care with the ongoing construction of a newly renovated 20-inpatient bed unit, expected to open by the end of 2024. Simultaneously, we're pursuing the necessary approvals to transform the Broadway Campus into a Healthy Village, consolidating outpatient health services, including adult and adolescent behavioral health office-based programs, to one convenient location.

National Recognition

HealthAlliance Hospital's dedication to community welfare has earned national recognition for Fare Share Spending. This places us among the top 20% of hospitals nationwide in community investment, according to the Lown Institute. This recognition reflects our commitment to put the priorities of our patients and communities first. Our collaborations with organizations like People's Place, the YWCA and YMCA of Ulster County, the Point of Praise Family Life Center, and others have expanded access to quality care through wellness education initiatives.

Our Workforce

None of these achievements would be possible without our devoted workforce, consistently praised for their exceptional, compassionate care around-the-clock, seven days a week.

Rondout Savings Branching Out

A Mixer You Can Bank On

Rondout Savings Bank President Cheryl Bowers began her long and illustrious banking career in 1980 at 267 Wall St. in Uptown Kingston.

The bank was known as Statewide Savings & Loan back then and Bowers worked in the back office and as a teller. Several other banks have been in that spot since, but Rondout Savings is opening its latest branch there and will show it off at the Chamber's next Networking Mixer on June 5.

"Forty-four years ago, my first bank job was in that building, where I stayed for 20 years until I went to Rondout Savings and I've been here now for 24 years," Bowers says. "I've come full circle. I started my career there and I will likely retire with that building being part of my bank's system."

The Mixer is scheduled from 5 to 7 p.m. and will feature food and beverages from Rondout Savings Bank customers. Bowers, who has been the bank's President since 2018, and her executive team will be on hand for the festivities.

"We are hoping to provide a superior networking opportunity, while bringing Chamber members together at a brand-new location," Bowers said. "We think this is an excellent way to show case our new Uptown branch and get an opportunity to bring the Chamber member community together."

The 267 Wall St. location is in the heart of Uptown and in the shadow of the Old Dutch Church, the Matthew Persen House and the Ulster County Courthouse. Bowers said when the last owner decided to sell the property, "we knew this would be an ideal location to expand our footprint in the Uptown district."

Bowers said the 3.5-story building may be old but has "great bones" and underwent a renovation to make it a "vibrant bank" for modern times.

"For the last 20 years or so, it hasn't gotten the love and attention that it needs," she said. "We were able to bring all the floors to life and use the space."

"The renovation was very well thought out—it was important for us to maintain some original elements of the building, to nicely fit into the historic district and at the same time, provide state-of-the art technology, finishes and a superior banking experience. The entire theme of our design is community, collaboration and cutting-edge technology."

Bowers said the design, which features plenty of glass to unify the space, was focused on being welcoming, collaborative and convenient. Bank officials took down the traditional barriers you encounter in most banks and built collaborative workspaces.

"We offer interactive technology that will help our leaders to better understand the needs of our customers and provide superior service. We have brought many lines of business leaders into this space," Bowers said, including commercial and residential lenders, investment executives and all the traditional banking services customers would expect.

"We are thrilled that all our team from the Schwenk Drive office will now serve our customers at the Wall Street office," she said. "We feel this will provide a seamless transition for our customers and all the friendly faces that they are used to seeing when they do their banking business."

Rondout Savings Bank offers six branch locations in Ulster County.

Bowers, a former Chamber of Commerce Board Chair, knows the importance of the popular networking Mixers that bring together the community's business leaders.

"At Rondout Savings, we make it our business to not just be a Chamber member but to actively participate, host and sponsor many types of events the Chamber offers," she said.

Black Leaders Feted At Celebration

Four exemplary Black leaders, who have shaped the future of Ulster County by driving change and building up others, will command the spotlight on June 18 at the Black Business Community Celebration at Ulster Savings Bank's Corporate Headquarters, 180 Schwenk Drive in Kingston.

The Ulster Chamber, together with Black History Kingston and Ulster County Tourism, is hosting the annual event, with Ulster Savings Bank as the Principal Sponsor, Ulster County Tourism as the Welcoming Sponsor, RCAL as the Diamond Sponsor and Blue-Byrd's Haberdashery as the Bronze Sponsor. This year's honorees include:

Black Business Excellence Award: Corey James

Corey is a Kingston native and multimedia journalist at Spectrum News in Albany. He said he was drawn to journalism because, as a child, he was struck by the lack of diversity on local news programs. "I didn't see a lot of people who looked like me doing it, so I said, 'I've got to blaze this trail.' That became extremely important to me as I began thinking about careers," said James, who, at the age of 34, already has built a stellar broadcasting resume that includes cross-platform production assistant at CNN's headquarters in Atlanta, Ga.

"The job entailed working with our national and political teams to cover a lot of the news that took place at the Capitol," he said. "It was a high-pressure job. You had to develop thick skin, but it was exhilarating because you had a front-row seat to history as it happened."

James, now a Spectrum News reporter covering a variety of stories for the Albany station, said he is honored to receive the award. "I was blown away that I was recognized, and I'm still speechless," said the 2008 Kingston High School graduate. "I'm very grateful as a hometown kid and a product of Kingston, but at the same time, you don't do it alone. I couldn't be where I am without my faith, my wife and my family."

James, who participated in wrestling, football and track and field at Kingston High School, began his college career at Nassau Community College and later transferred to SUNY Cortland, where he majored in communications and African studies, earning a bachelor's degree in 2013.

He landed his first job out of college at CBS Radio, 92.9, "The Game," a sports radio station (now Audacy, Inc.) in Atlanta, and then got hired at CNN, first as a tour guide. He quickly moved up the ranks to the production team, where he was on the front line of major breaking stories, including the 2016 and 2020 presidential elections, President Trump's impeachment trials, the Capitol riot and COVID-19 outbreak.

During the pandemic, James said he did some soul searching and started rethinking his career. "I wanted to switch and be on the other side of the camera to tell those stories that don't often get told, so I put together a reel on YouTube and began looking into other markets across the country."

Spectrum News hired him as a multimedia journalist in June 2022, a role he relishes and one that takes him back full circle to those days of watching TV news without adequate Black representation. "Typically, when you're reporting on communities of color, or when you see stations reporting on communities of color, it's often not positive," he said. "It's more the negative things that happen, so as a Black man, it's important to report on the positives ... and change that stigma and show young African Americans that they can follow this path as well."

Maude Bruce Community Impact Award: Essie "Liz" Baker

Liz is the owner of We Got the Juice, a combined juice bar and art gallery at 694 Broadway in Kingston. The Kingston businesswoman said she is honored to share the stage with other Black leaders who inspire others to greatness.

"It's a good feeling to be recognized because I've been doing what I'm doing for quite some time, but my real reward is seeing results and helping people," said Baker, owner of We Got the Juice, which she opened just before the pandemic.

Baker, a former board member at Midtown Kingston Rising, Kingston Midtown Arts District (MAD) and Cannabis Task Force Advisory Board and current board member at the Midtown Business Alliance, opened Broadway Arts, a creative space for the underserved community, in 2015 and expanded it to We Got the Juice in 2019—a combined art gallery and healthy juice bar.

"I sit in meetings and on boards and advocate for those who can't advocate for themselves, and I'm all about empowering people, especially young women. I guess I find my greatest joy in making sure everybody else is OK since I am so blessed and being that person that I needed as a teenager," Baker said.

Black Business Leadership Award: Rendesia Scott

Rendesia is the Director of the Business Advising Center at SUNY New Paltz, a position she has held since 2005. In her role, she oversees the undergraduate advising curriculum for the School of Business. She has counseled and supported thousands of students in their pursuit of a Bachelor's or Master's Degree in Business. Her passion for nurturing talent and fostering growth has had a profound impact on the lives of her students, as evidenced by their numerous achievements and successes. She is a transformative leader who operates with the highest degree of integrity, professionalism and ethics.

Young Black Leader Award: Shataya McComb

Shataya is the founder of the Point God Academy (PGA), which empowers aspiring basketball players to reach their goals. A star basketball player herself, McComb was a longtime coach at Tay Fisher's Camp and Clinics, Summer Sizzle in Kingston, the Bidy League and AAU basketball. She is also the Program Director at the Boys and Girls Club of Kingston,

Essie "Liz" Baker

Rendesia Scott

whose Executive Director Dan Whalen said, "Shataya embodies everything midtown Kingston stands for. There is no better energy, soul or role model for BGC members than Shataya. She comes in every day with an infectious glowing attitude and personality that rubs off on our kids. She has the ability to engage all of our kids and get the most out of them. She has a tremendous effect on our members and community."

The Black Business Awards Ceremony begins at 4:30 p.m. followed by a community celebration from 6 to 8 p.m. Pointe of Praise is catering the event, and music will be provided by the Instruments of Praise Choir and DJ Seven Spirits Entertainment. Radio Kingston will livestream the event.
